1. When computers first appeared on the scene, it was thought they would make us more productive in providing goods and services, smarter and possibly happier. Skeptics claim that the opposite is true as computers have proved disappointing in terms of productivity, and have made us less happy and more stupid because information is not knowledge.

Which of these points of view do you agree with most? Support your argument with reasons and/or examples from your own experience and observations.

Computers have become an integral part of our lives, and we can see them working to make things easier all around us. They have enabled us to make information sharing a lot easier and also helped us to become more organized at workplaces. Hence, I believe that computers have made us happier as we can accomplish much more within a limited time frame.

Information sharing has been made much easier due to the existence of computers. Computers enable access to emails, social networks and video sharing platforms, which easily allows us to send out and receive information. This has made learning easier and has also enabled us to find out what is happening around the world. For example, we are able to access and read global news through the internet wherever we are.

Handling tasks at our jobs have also become more organized as we can create, store and retrieve data with ease. The calculation and the storing of data can be done accurately by computers, allowing us to focus on solving bigger problems and not worry about the minor details which can be automated such as calculations and memorizing. This has also ensured that the work is done correctly and efficiently.

Some people argue that computers have made us less productive by providing us with ways to waste our time. I strongly believe that computers are not the reason for this, as they are a medium that allows us to achieve our means efficiently. How we use that medium depends entirely on us. It would be unwise to forego the use of computers which have made the human endeavor to simplify life possible. (274 words)

2. More and more students are studying at universities abroad, either because it is cheaper, or because they feel they can receive a better education, or because it will provide them with greater professional opportunities.

Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of studying abroad. Support your arguments with reasons and/or examples from your own experience and observations.

It is a fact nowadays that more students prefer to study overseas. I agree with the trend that it is better for children to attend foreign universities. Specifically,, students will receive a better education, and it will help to open their minds.

There are plenty of universities around the world, and many of them provide better education resources. Thus, students may have more options and is able to choose an elite university rather than choosing one directly from their own country. Moreover, the ideas and ways of thinking are usually different abroad because of the cultural and understanding differences, which help students to open their minds.

However, the students will find it difficult to adapt to the lifestyle overseas. This is because they feel hard to build a relationship between local students due to communication problems and language barriers. Therefore, it will cause them to feel lonely, and the students suffer from it, which may result in some mental problems. Furthermore, the diets are so different that students cannot even enjoy their meal every day and have an unsatisfied experience abroad.

As a result, learning abroad has both positive and negative effects on students. In my opinion, the advantages overweigh the disadvantages because it is more important to broaden horizons and acquire comprehensive knowledge. (214 words)

3. Most people in what are known as the developed nations have homes full of gadgets and labor-saving devices, from vacuum cleaners and dishwashers to the latest in computer technology. Some people claim that despite all these labor-saving devices, we seem to have less free time. In your opinion, has technology improved the quality of life or made it more complicated? Support your arguments with reasons and/or examples from your own experience and observations.

Due to the increasing development of technology, there have been numerous changes in our daily lives. In my opinion, technology plays a crucial role and improves our living standard significantly. Some of the reasons include time-saving due to the labor-saving devices and also the improvement in transportation infrastructures.

The devices used at home are able to save time for people because they are able to help us in doing housework. Specifically, cleaning at home is time-consuming because we have to wash the dishes and clean floors by hand. However, with the help of dishwashers and auto-cleaning machines, people no longer have to spend the time to do the cleaning, giving them more time to earn money or take a rest.

Furthermore, the development in transportation helps people to enjoy trips around the world. Citizens are now more willing to explore the world due to modern technology used in planes and trains that are able to make trips cheaper and shorter than before. Therefore, people are more likely to visit countries overseas to enjoy the beauty of nature as well as different cultures. As a result, technology adds colors to our lives.

Although some people claim that technology will cause us to become less productive, I believe that this is not true as the benefits greatly outweigh the drawbacks in my opinion. Based on the examples above, I strongly believe that we will have a higher living standard with the help of technology. (242 words)

4. Schools should prepare students for the university rather than for work, 'How far do you agree with this statement. Support your point of view with reasons and/or examples from your own experience or observations.

Schools are the stepping stones for people to build their fundamentals and basics of numeracy and literacy. I believe that schools play a crucial role in preparing students for universities. Therefore, I agree that schools should prepare students for the university rather than work because schools introduce students to critical basic skills and in still important values.

Critical skills, especially in both literacy and numeracy which are required for work cannot be learned in one day. Therefore, schools have a role to play in ensuring that students learn these essential skills that will enable them to complete various tasks. When students have grasped these basic concepts, they can then proceed to specialize in their interests in universities, which will prepare them for work.

Apart from the essential skills that are required, values are also a very important aspect to consider, as values define a person. If a student is prepared for work instead of universities, more emphasis may be placed on having the required skills rather than teaching them about important values. This approach may cause students to have less creativity in their minds, and may also cause everybody to be the same.

Although some people argue that schools should introduce working aspects as it will prepare the students for their future better, I can only agree to a certain extent. Introducing students to the concept of working is sufficient, and schools should not go further than that. Based on the reasons above, I strongly believe that schools should prepare students for universities rather than work.

5. 'Some types of employment are more suitable for men and other types of employment are more appropriate for women.' To what extent do you agree with this statement? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

In this day and age, a lot of emphases has been put on gender equality, and I am a strong believer of this. However, in my opinion, I still do think that some employments are more suitable for men as compared to women. This is because some jobs require extensive amounts of physical capabilities and also contain high risks.

Jobs in the construction industry generally require a lot of labor work and may cause physical strain. Therefore, men who have the more suitable physical capabilities would be a better fit for these roles. It is scientifically proven that men generally have more physical strength than women. However, although men are more suitable in many cases, it does not mean that women should be excluded completely from these opportunities.

In addition, military jobs also consist of more men than women. This is because working in the military requires enormous amounts of strength and endurance. It is also a job which has higher risks, which society, in general, claim that it should be a more suitable job for men.

In conclusion, although gender equality is morally right, there are some employments which are better suited for men as compared to women. Therefore, I agree with the statement that some types of employment are more appropriate depending on the gender. (217 words)

6. 'Computer technology has had more of a negative than a positive impact on society. How far do you agree with this statement? Support your views with reasons and/or examples from your own experience.

Ever since the computer has been introduced prior to the Information Age, its invention has brought about numerous benefits. Therefore, I disagree with the statement that 'computer technology has had more of a negative than a positive impact on society'. I believe that computers have brought about benefits such as improving work efficiency and also improved information sharing.

Nowadays, computers are essential in every company, as they are required to perform numerous tasks. Office workers such as accountants and engineers use computers daily to carry out their calculations and send e-mails to corresponding parties. Computers have allowed for the improvement of work efficiency as these calculations are now able to be performed within seconds, as compared to years ago when all calculations were done manually.

Secondly, computers have also allowed information sharing to be done easily worldwide. A story reported and published by a company in Australia is accessible by residents in America. This shows that everyone around the world is linked by the Internet which is only possible due to the invention of computers.

Although some people claim that computers may bring about negative impacts such as causing us to be less productive, I disagree with that statement. I believe it is up to computers users' discretion on how they want to spend their time using it. Therefore, I disagree with the statement and believe that computers have brought numerous positive impacts on society. (235 words)

7. 'Nowadays many young people leave home at an early age to either study or work in another city.' Do you think this has more advantages or disadvantages for young people? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

In recent times, it is a common trend that young people leave home at an early stage to study or work in another city. This trend is becoming more popular amongst young people because it has a number of benefits in doing so. I believe that this has more advantages for young people, such as broadening one's perspective in the working world and also allowing them to experience different cultures.

Traveling out of the city and getting out of a person's comfort zone is proven to be one of the quickest ways to pick up new skills and even values. Young people who travel to study or work in another city are able to broaden their perspectives quickly as they have to adapt quickly to make the most out of it. For example, when a construction worker leaves their city to work on another project, he may be exposed to more economical and innovative approaches which he is able to then addinto his repertoire.

Secondly, when young people leave home to study or work in another city, they are also exposed to other cultures which may allow them to develop different values. Learning other cultures apart from their own will enable them to appreciate the little things which they may have taken for granted.

In conclusion, it can be seen that leaving home at an early stage to study or work brings about numerous benefits such as the reasons above. Therefore, I strongly believe that there are more advantages than disadvantages for younger people to travel to either study or work in another city.

8. What are some of the Pros and Cons of extreme/adventure sports? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

An extreme sport is a type of sport which has gotten its name due to the extreme measures that the sports take to give its participants the thrill. There are numerous types of extreme sports, and some of them include skydiving and body boarding. However, these types of sports have some pros and cons. Although it gives a participant the thrill and joy he is seeking, there may be some risks involved.

Extreme sports such as skydiving require training and responsible mentors to ensure that safeties of the participants are secured. If it all goes to plan, then extreme sports is able to give its participants a new type of thrill and sensation. Participants will be able to experience situations where they never thought was possible, such as free-falling from an airplane when skydiving.

However, as mentioned previously, safety is a very important measure that has to be ensured. This is because if a mistake or an accident was to happen, it might cost someone's life. For example, if the weather was not estimated properly and an individual proceeds to skydive, extreme weather conditions may cause the landing of the skydiver to be a tragic one. That is a very expensive cost just to seek for some thrill.

In conclusion, there are numerous pros and cons for extreme sports. However, if all safety measures were taken and enough test runs have been done for that particular sport, an extreme sport can be claimed as the best sport to take part in. (250 words)

9. Large shopping malls are replacing small shops. What is your opinion on this change? Good or bad. Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your/own experience.

In many countries around the world, large shopping malls have been replacing small individual shops. In my opinion, this is an inevitable change and it will bring numerous benefits to societies and communities. Therefore, I believe that this change should be promoted and accepted with open arms because it will allow communities' landscapes to be improved and also allow us to spend our time more efficiently.

Large shopping malls essentially consist of numerous shops compiled into one big building. Using this approach rather than building multiple shops can help improve a communities' landscape as the space saved from building smaller shops may be used for something better, such as building a park or lake. These public infrastructures not only improve the community's landscape but may also increase land value.

Secondly, building a large shopping mall also allows us to complete all our errands by just visiting one place. Instead of making numerous trips to purchase our essentials, we are able to spend our time efficiently and obtain all our needs in the respective shopping mall.

In conclusion, based on the aforementioned points, I believe that replacing smaller shops with large shopping malls is the right approach as we head into the future. Apart from just benefitting us consumers, it may also help improve the environment by reducing the number of car trips made from place to place. (227 words)

10. Nowadays, people spend too much time at work to the extent that they hardly have time for their personal life. Do you agree with this statement? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

As the working industry continues to be more competitive, people tend to stay longer at their workplaces, hoping that it would give them an edge over their peers. Leading this lifestyle may cause people to spend too much time at work to the extent that they hardly have time for their personal life. Therefore, I agree with the statement because people are getting more competitive amongst each other and also because some people are very money-driven.

Every year, there are large amounts of graduates leaving universities which exceed the number of jobs available. Therefore, it is usually the employees who are hardworking or exceptional who are retained instead of being replaced by bright graduates. This situation causes many employees within companies to work even harder and sometimes stay back to work overtime, which gives them less time for their own personal matters

Furthermore, there are also employees who are very money-driven. They believe that the more they earn, the happier they will be. Therefore, they tend to put in extra hours into their workplaces and try to obtain more salary from their bosses. There are even some extreme cases where employees only leave their workplaces for home at midnight.

In conclusion, there is a significant amount of people around the world who spend too much time at work to the extent that they hardly have time for their own personal matters. Therefore, I strongly agree with this statement, and employers should help in changing their employees' attitudes and values. (249 words)

11. Many young people nowadays are imitating celebrities in sports and movies. In your opinion, is this good or bad? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Many young people nowadays are imitating celebrities they watch on television, especially through movies or sporting programs. In my opinion, if appropriate programs are shown to these young people, it can serve as a great motivation and inspiration, or even allow them to be more knowledgeable. Therefore, I believe that imitating celebrities in sports and movies to a certain extent is good.

Watching sporting programs may help young people in developing interests and hobbies. Furthermore, aspiring sports players who watch these programs may find motivation and inspiration from their idols, who are professional sports players around the world. For example, watching the Olympics may inspire young athletes to work harder through their training in hoping that they would someday represent their own country.

Furthermore, certain movies that celebrities act in are based on actual history or science. If these movies are accessible to the younger generation, they may learn about the past and some concepts that they are not exposed to in school. This can help to improve their general knowledge, and may even spark some brilliant minds to become historians or scientists.

In conclusion, allowing young people to imitate certain celebrities to an extent should be encouraged due to the reasons above. Therefore, I strongly believe that watching the right programs in both movies and sports can be good for younger people. (223 words)

12. In the past 100 years, there have been many inventions such as antibiotics, airplanes, and computers. Some of the greatest inventions are due to advancements in medicine, science and technology. What do you think is the most important of the advancements? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

In the past century, there have been numerous inventions that have changed our lives and the way we live it. Inventions such as computers, airplanes and antibiotics have brought numerous benefits into the world's economy. I believe that the biggest contributor to all the advancements so far is technology. This is because the advancement of technology is responsible for the inventions of better instruments and machinery that lead to breakthroughs in science and medicine.

Firstly, the majority of the discoveries made through science is due to the existence of advanced machinery such as the microscope. These advanced machinery allow further testing as compared to the past, therefore leading to a more in-depth study of cells and organisms. Apart from that, advancement in the field of technology has also allowed for processing to be more efficient. This improvement in efficiency will enable mass production of instruments or machinery that are essential for scientists to make discoveries.

Furthermore, technology is also very important in the field of medicine. New viruses are always appearing around the world, and it is up to the doctors to immediately counter these viruses with new types of medicine. With the help of technology, doctors canefficiently carry out their study on the viruses and start producing a cure.

In conclusion, as mentioned in the paragraphs above, all advancements in other fields such as medicine and science depend on technology. Therefore, I believe that the advancement in technology is the most important one amongst others. (247 words)

13. Some people prefer to spend their holidays in resorts where everything is organized for them and they take little interest in the country they are visiting. Others prefer to travel around the country and to see how the people live, to get to know their customs and traditions and cuisine. Write an essay on which type of foreign travel you think is best for both the tourist and the local community.

People who travel have different preferences in how they would want to allocate their time. Some people prefer to spend their holidays by relaxing in holiday resorts whereas some people prefer to learn the destination's customs and traditions. In my opinion, the type of travel that is best for both the tourist and local community is the type where the traveler is eager to know more about the destination.

When a tourist visits a destination and takes an initiative to learn about the country's customs and traditions, they are able to broaden their perspectives and learn different cultures. Furthermore, they are also able to try different types of cuisines which allow them to experience different sensations and even learn more recipes. Taking this approach benefits the tourist greatly as they gain so much knowledge as compared to when they are just relaxing in a resort.

In addition, the local community benefits greatly when tourists are keen on learning different customs and traditions of their destination. This is because tourists will be more inclined to buy local products as souvenirs if they genuinely enjoy the local customs. Tourists who want to experience the local's cuisines will also help the local community as they will dine in local restaurants.

In conclusion, although there are different types of tourists around the world, a tourist who takes the initiative to learn about their destination's culture and customs will benefit the tourist and the local community most. (242 words)

14. "The only thing that interferes with my learning is my education"- Einstein. What does he mean by that? And do you agree with his statement? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Einstein once said, "The only thing that interferes with my learning is my education." What I believe he meant by saying that is that the education system does not prepare students enough for the real world. This may be because schools nowadays heavily emphasize on learning literacy and numeracy only instead of equipping students with general knowledge. In my opinion, I agree with Einstein's statement to a certain extent that the education system does limit students' learning in certain aspects such as basic living skills and preparation for the working life.

When students attend school, they basically go through daily classes which educate them on numeracy and literacy. Although learning these skills are important, schools should also put some emphasis on basic living skills. This means that students should be taught how to think outside the box and also to survive on their own in certain situations. These basic living skills are important as they equip students with general knowledge on how to survive on their own.

Furthermore, schools also provide very little preparation for the working life. Although students will complete their course with basic skills, they are not equipped with the right skills such as communication and interpersonal skills which will aid them in scoring their first job.

However, although the education does limit students' learning in certain aspects, the fundamentals that schools cover are also essential. Therefore, I agree with Einstein's statement only to a certain extent. (240 words)

15. It is usually foolish to get married before completing your studies and getting established in a good job? Do you agree or disagree? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Marriages that occur in the 21st century have drastically changed as compared to decades ago. Nowadays, many people claim that it is foolish to get married before getting established in a good job. I personally agree with the statement as an individual should be financially stable and be ready for commitment before marriage becomes a topic of discussion.

Financial stability means that an individual should have a steady flow of income that is capable of supporting a family. If a person is unable to achieve this status, it would be difficult for him to get married and start a family with his partner. This situation becomes more complicated when kids are involved, as he would have to start considering their education fees.

Additionally, if an individual has not completed his studies and has already thought about marriage, he may have multiple commitments. For example, he may be too busy studying for an exam without having the time to earn income or even have time to spend with his family. This may eventually lead to disagreements between family members.

In conclusion, I believe that getting married before completing your studies or getting established in a good job is not a wise decision. An individual should be capable of being responsible before even considering marriage, and eventually a family. (217 words)

16. 'Students should be required to stay in school until the age of eighteen.' To what extent do you agree or disagree with this statement? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

The education systems in schools are designed so that students will be able to develop essential skills and values which prepare them for their future. In my opinion, I believe that students should be required to stay in school until the age of eighteen. This is because students develop quicker mentally at a younger age and also because it is an adequate timeframe to prepare students for the working life.

It is scientifically proven that students learn better at a younger age. This is because their minds are still fresh and vulnerable to various types of information. They tend to adapt quickly and absorb information easier as compared to the elderly. For example, children are able to learn a new language much quicker than the elderly. Therefore, schools are able to take advantage of this fact and educate the students earlier on in their life. Future

Secondly, spending almost the first quarter of an individual's life learning about literacy and numeracy is essential. This is because students have to establish a foundation before moving on to learn specialized skills that will be required in their career. For example, students have to learn multiplication before moving on to more complex equations such as derivations. Therefore, schools should do their best to educate students on every aspect possible until they are eighteen.

Although some people may argue that the education system is flawed, and students are able to learn better on their own, I believe that schools are essential due to the paragraphs above. Therefore, I strongly believe that students should be required to stay in school until the age of eighteen. (269 words)

17. 'Environmental problems are too great to be managed by individuals so real change can only be achieved at government level.'

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this statement? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Environmental problems have gotten worse over the past few years to the extent that if nothing is done about it, it may cause irreversible damage. However, given how major this issue has become, I believe that the government has a crucial role to play in fixing this. This is because governments have the power to influence other people, and they also have the ability to enforce laws.

Governments are considered as the authorities that are able to make decisions and influence people. Therefore, they should assume the role of a leader and take various initiatives to address the current environmental problems. For example, they are able to form societies and groups that are able to be proactive in forming solutions for environmental problems such as global warming. Furthermore, governments are also able to fund these societies which will allow them to produce results more efficiently.

Secondly, governments are also able to enforce laws against any action that may cause harm to the environment. For example, they can issue fines and permits to factories which output excessive amounts of harmful gasses or liquids. Issuing these fines will limit the output of factories, which will then reduce the total amount of harmful substances that are produced.

In conclusion, governments have a much bigger role to play in ensuring that environmental problems are addressed. Therefore, based on the reasons above, I believe that the current environmental problems can only be managed at government level. (241 words)

18. A company's higher level authorities should get their employees' inputs during decision-making processes. Discuss. Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Business industries around the world are getting more competitive due to bright young people that come up with fresh ideas. In my opinion, I believe that bosses and managers of various companies should include their employees' input during decision-making processes. This is because obtaining multiple suggestions may lead to better decisions and also brand new ideas.

When making decisions, compiling various ideas is definitely better than just having one idea. This is because when various people with various backgrounds contribute to the decision-making process, it would allow them to exchange ideas and maybe produce a better result. For example, an international employee is able to share his insight on different approaches than the usual one. Therefore, bosses and managers should definitely include the inputs of their employees' when making decisions.

Furthermore, as mentioned previously, younger people with fresher ideas are appearing every day in this competitive industry. Therefore, when inviting the younger employees to attend meetings, they may be introduced to more innovative and sustainable designs. For example, new employees may prefer to perform work through digital applications instead of writing, which may improve efficiency. These approaches that may be suggested by the younger employees may even boost the company's revenue and lead it to success amongst other competitors.

In conclusion, I believe that a company's higher level authorities should definitely include their employee's inputs during decision-making processes. In order to be successful, bosses and managers must also be willing to learn, and who better to start with than their own employees. (252 words)

19. Communication has changed significantly in the last 10 years. Discuss pros and cons of this change. Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Due to the rapid development in technology over the last 10 years, communication methods have changed drastically. The appearance of smart phones have made communication much more convenient but may have some drawbacks as well such as causing people to be anti-social. Therefore, it can be seen that there are pros and cons in this development.

Smart phones have benefitted people all around the world in terms of communication. People no longer have to make the effort to send a mail to a friend. For example, whenever a person wishes to contact a friend or family member, all the person has to do is simply press a few buttons with their fingers. This form of communication has saved people lots of time and effort.

However, communicating only through the virtual world may cause some people to be anti-social. The lack of organizing meet-ups or going out to meet people may eventually cause an individual to be more introverted than he previously was. For example, people nowadays tend to constantly be caught up on their phone during meals with others. Furthermore, people may also be too distracted with their phones when they actually do meet up.

In conclusion, it can be seen that the development of communication has brought about both good and bad changes. In my opinion, the benefits greatly outweigh the drawbacks, and the drawbacks are able to be countered as long as the person uses it wisely. (220 words)

20. Traveling overseas to study is overrated. We have brilliant scholars who have studied locally. In your opinion, is travel really required for higher studies? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

It has recently been a trend for students to travel overseas in order to further their studies. However, in my opinion, traveling overseas is not required to obtain a better education. This is because local education institutes are also capable of preparing you for your career. Furthermore, the success of a person's career is based on his own efforts and not dependent on where he chooses to study.

One of the main reasons that students travel overseas to study is because they assume that they will be exposed to a better education system. Although this may be true to a certain extent, it is definitely not necessary for an individual to further his studies. Local education institutes are also capable of preparing someone for the future. For example, the syllabus which is covered in local universities is the same although the lecturers are different.

Secondly, a person's success does not only depend on the education he receives, but also the effort he puts into his passion. Therefore, studying at a better university does not guarantee you a job or even a career. For example, if a student were to attend a prestigious university such as Harvard but fails to study, he will still be unable to graduate. This means that anyone who studies locally but works twice as hard will be able to perform just as well as a person who travels overseas to study.

In conclusion, studying overseas may have more options to further your studies, but is definitely not necessary to be successful in your career. Therefore, I believe that travel is not required for higher studies. (269 words)

21. The idea of space travel is fantastic these days and scientists are very fascinated towards it. However, there are many environmental problems in our planet that we should resolve first before considering space travel that would cost a significant sum. What is your opinion? Support your point of view with reasons and examples from your own experience.

Space travel has always been a topic of interest between scientists as they believe that the Earth would eventually come to an end. Research on space costs huge amounts of money and some people argue that governments should be spending that money on resolving current environmental problems in Earth instead. In my opinion, I believe that governments should continue to fund space travel because it may help secure our future and also because money is not enough to change people.

Environmental problems around the Earth have become worse as time passes. This is because there are more factories being built each year to support various industries. Therefore, if this situation continues, there might be a time when we will have to consider another planet to live in. Although it is impossible for us to travel to another planet at the moment, scientists should continue carrying out their thorough research and hopefully they will eventually make a breakthrough.

Secondly, human behavior, which is the source of most environmental problems, is hard to change. Therefore, even if governments were to spend more money on trying to improve the current environmental problems, it may have too little of an impact and it would not be enough to improve the current issues. For example, although the governments have introduced numerous recycling initiatives, some ignorant people still fail to abide the laws.

In conclusion, I do agree to a certain extent that governments must take more action towards resolving current environmental problems. However, they should not sacrifice the funding for space travel as this is an important research that may lead to the possibility of a future for us. (274 words)

22."The illiterate of the 21st century will not be those who cannot read and write, but those who cannot learn, unlearn, and relearn" – Alvin Toffle. What do you understand from Alvin's statement? Elaborate on your understanding and support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Illiterate is defined as an individual who is unable to read or write. What I believe Alvin Toffle meant from his statement is that people are getting more ignorant and reluctant to learn nowadays. This is because people may be taking education for granted, whereas in the olden days, everyone was considered blessed to be given the opportunity to learn.

Almost everyone around the world nowadays has been granted the opportunity to attend schools by their parents. Governments are more developed as well and they can help fund the education system. For example, majority of the public schools are free for students to attend as they are funded by the government. I believe that because of this, people are taking education for granted, thus causing them to be less inclined to learn.

The comparison that Alvin made was based on what illiterate meant in the past. In the past, education was rare and only selected people have the opportunity to learn. Therefore, majority of the people in the past would have accepted if they were given the opportunity to learn, and they would have also made the most out of it. In my opinion, learning how to read and write were the most important things at that time, as compared to now, where people care more about money and happiness instead.

In conclusion, Alvin made a clear comparison between the current situation and the past. In my opinion, I agree with his statement and think that people are starting to take education for granted.

23. Do you think that the English Language will continue to remain as the global language despite globalization? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

There are many spoken languages around the world, but the English Language is considered in the international language. In my opinion, although globalization is bound to occur, English Language will still remain as the global language. This is because the English Language has already been the international language for centuries and also because almost every country already lists their international products in English.

Ever since ancient times, English Language has been declared the international language and has always been a language of conversation between different countries. For example, when different countries around the world gather for events such as the Olympics, English will be the main communication language. Therefore, it is a difficult and tedious process to alter this tradition that has already been ongoing for centuries to another language as the global language.

Furthermore, majority of the countries around the world has already made it a habit to translate their products to English when marketing globally. If the global language was to be changed, these countries will then have to go through tedious processes to change the language on every product, which I believe will not be the preferred situation

In conclusion, although some countries are developing in the economic industry, the English Language will still remain as the international language. The chances of another language being the international language are not impossible, but will take a long time. (230 words)

24. It is said that for some developed countries, tourism may cause some disadvantages. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Tourism is a source of income for countries around the world. However, some people claim that tourism causes disadvantages such as overpopulation. I strongly disagree with the mentioned claim and believe that tourism brings nothing but benefits to a country. This is because tourism is a major source of income for governments and is also an opportunity to advertise the country's pride such as animals or culture.

Tourism generally refers to the industry where people across the world visit one country for a holiday. When tourists visit a country, they will tend to purchase local products and visit hotspots that will require spending. This will not only provide jobs for the locals but also allow the government to earn more income, leading to an increase in the country's economy.

Furthermore, tourism also allows visitors to experience a country's culture and food. If a tourist enjoyed his experience in a country, he may share his experiences with friends or colleagues and that may eventually lead to more visits from tourists. These visits will not only help the country's economy, but will also allow the country to be more known amongst the other countries in the world.

Although there is the possibility of tourism bringing some disadvantages such as overpopulation in a country, I believe that the advantages greatly outweigh the disadvantages. Therefore, countries should definitely put in effort to promote tourism. (230 words)

25. It is said that learning a new language at an early age is helpful for children. Would it be more positive for their future aspect or will it have some adverse effects instead by learning a new language at an early age. What is your opinion on this? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Understanding multiple languages is always beneficial especially when traveling to relevant countries. In my opinion, learning a new language at an early age is very helpful for children. This is because when they grow up, they may be required to converse in multiple languages for business purposes and also whentravel to other countries.

There are only a few selected countries in the world that are currently flourishing in the economy. Therefore, understanding the languages of these countries would definitely be beneficial to business if they plan to go international. For example, if an English company plans to expand to China, understand the Chinese language would be advantageous. It is also scientifically proven that learning a language at a younger age is easier.

It has also become a trend that many young people around the world prefer to travel instead of starting work as soon as they graduate. If these travelers understood the languages of the countries they plan to visit, it would definitely enhance their experience and also broaden their perspectives. For example, if a person visits Spain and understands Spanish, he would be able to order food and learn their culture easier. Furthermore, there are also no disadvantages to understanding more languages.

Although some people claim that learning multiple languages at an early age may confuse children, I believe that it is definitely doable with the right approach. Therefore, I strongly agree with the statement that learning a new language at an early age is helpful for children. (250 words)

26. Has there been any recent invention that you think proved either beneficial or detrimental to the society? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

There have been numerous inventions in the world due to the rapid development of technology. One of the inventions that have brought about various benefits is the smart phone. The smart phone is a very intelligent device and is able to allow us to perform video calls and also work related tasks.

Videos are a very efficient way of delivering and presenting information. For example, companies have introduced video interviews which are very convenient for both the company and the candidate as well. Therefore, being able to make and watch videos via the smart phone allows numerous methods of delivering information between various parties.

Furthermore, the smart phone also enables people to work on their phone. Various applications have been introduced that simplifies tasks such as calculators and notepads. People are also able to access e-mails on their phones and respond immediately to urgent matters. This can improve the efficiency of work related tasks and can also lead to an increase in the business' revenue.

In conclusion, I believe the smart phone which is a recent invention is very beneficial as it has brought about numerous benefits in our lives. As technology continues to develop, there will eventually be more inventions that will simplify daily tasks. (204 words)

27. Some people believe that the law changes human behaviour. Do you agree or disagree with the statement? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

The law has been createdin order to preserve peace and harmony in various communities. However, some people believe that law changes human behavior. In my opinion, I believe that the law does not change people because the law exists in order to protect people only. This means it only prevents people from causing harm and does not change how people should behave.

Firstly, different people behave differently, and it is based on their daily habits and exposure to surroundings. For example, a person tends to behave similar to his company, such as his parents or friends. Apart from that, it is also based on the social media that he involves himself in. Based on this exposure, an individual will act accordingly depending on the situation he is in.

Secondly, when people break the law, it is usually not because of his behavior. A person's behavior is how he acts every day, whereas a committed crime is usually because of desperation or some other reasons. For example, a criminal would only steal money from someone if he is in terrible conditions such as starvation. The law was set up to punish these criminals and to ensure that the general public is able to live in peace. Therefore, it is evident that the law does not change human behavior.

In conclusion, although some people believe that the law may change human behavior, I believe that the law is just playing its role in ensuring that people are able to live happily. The behavior of a person is not defined by law but by people who they interact with daily. (268 words)

28. Do you think that the place where a person was brought up has an influence on his accomplishments? Elaborate on your opinion on whether you agree or disagree with an example of a successful person you know.

Some people think that the place where a person is brought up influences his accomplishments. I disagree with that idea because there are numerous successful celebrities today that did not have the best childhood. For example, Dwayne Johnson was brought up in the slums by a single mother but still turned out to be one of the most successful and influential person today.

Success depends on hard work and efforts, not where you were brought up. It was evident in Dwayne's childhood as he only lived day to day with minimal money. He did not have the privilege to attend good schools, but his hard work and determination has managed to get him a career in wrestling. That was only a start to his successful career.

Apart from that, perseverance was also another value he emphasized on. The ability to always pick yourself up when you fall will help you face numerous challenges. This means that, although you face more hardship than other people, you should not give up and continue to pursue your dreams.

In Dwayne's situation, it was clear that the place where he was brought up was not optimal to be successful, yet he managed to get to where he is today by perseverance.

In conclusion, it is evident that the place where you were brought up does not affect your accomplishments. In Dwayne Johnson's case, it was his hard work and perseverance that managed to help him to get where he is today. (247 words)

29. A common marketing strategy for big companies is to introduce various offers and discounts. However, these strategies may have impacts on their reputation. What are some of the impacts? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Big companies share the same marketing strategy to improve sales, which is to introduce various offers and discounts. However, these strategies may sometimes affect their reputation. For example, if a product were to always have discounts, people may have doubts on the product's authenticity. Furthermore, it may also cause people to think that the discounts may just be a way to influence consumers.

For companies to gain revenue from sales, they have to sell products at a higher price compared to the production price. This means that for products that are of good material, the price would be relatively high. However, if discounts and offers are always introduced for certain products, it may cause customers to question the authenticity of the product. For example, if a product was to be made of leather but was sold at a very cheap price, customers may wonder if the product is really made of genuine leather.

Furthermore, if a product always remains on discount, customers may have the idea that it is just a method of influencing customers to buy products. The reason why discounts and offer appeal to customers is because they think that they are obtaining these products at a good price. However, if the products were to always be on sale, customers will question if they are getting a good price at all.

In conclusion, although discounts and offers are a good marketing strategy to boost revenue, they should be used strategically and not every time. This is because customers are smart and will always figure out scams when they come across them. (263 words)

30. Parents should be held legally responsible for their children's actions. Do you agree or disagree with this statement? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Some people think that parents should be held legally responsible for their children's actions. This is because it is the parents' responsibility to shape their children and instill good values into them. However, I strongly disagree that they should be legally responsible if their children were cause harm or break the rules. This is because it is not only the parents who would influence children's thoughts, but also exposure from the society and from friends.

Parents play an important role in children's upbringing as they spend most time with them. However, when children get sent to school, they may be exposed to different activities and people. At a young age, children get easily influenced from what they see. For example, if a boy's friend were to show him a video of violent material, he may be influenced and carry out a similar thing. Parents would not have had control over this occurrence, and it would not be fair if they were to be charged for it.

Majority of children also undergo a rebellious stage in their life. This is a stage when they become extra stubborn and frequently disagree with their parents' suggestions. However, this does not mean that they are criminals as it may just be a phase of life. Therefore, if they do something wrong due to misguidance or bad influence, parents should definitely not be held legally responsible for their children's mistake.

In conclusion, although parents play a crucial role in ensuring that their children are brought up well, they should not be held legally responsible for their children's actions as a person's action is always based on his own thoughts. (274 words)

31. Do you think that the rapid development of new technologies in recent years is a boon or curse for societies around the world? What is your opinion on this and support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Due to the rapid advancement of technology, there have been many inventions that have benefitted our lives. I believe that this rapid development is a great boon for societies around the world. This is because various inventions are able to boost the economy and also help societies keep connected around the world.

One of the greatest inventions up to date is online shopping. Online shopping has brought about numerous benefits and has also made daily tasks much more efficient. People don't have to put in the physical effort to travel a certain distance to purchase products. They are able to do it at the comfort of their own home and at any time that is convenient. This has helped people save a lot of time and effort.

There are also many other inventions that have helped us keep connected with our loved ones. Video call applications such as Skype allow family and friends to keep in contact with each other even though they are thousands of miles apart. For example, parents are able to see their children through the video application even though their children are studying overseas.

Although some people disagree and claim that the rapid development of new technologies have made us less productive, I believe that it is up to the people on how they allocate their time. Therefore, I strongly agree that technology has been a great boon to societies around the world. (237 words)

32. In the current education system, are assessments through formal written examinations still a valid method of assessing students? What is your opinion on this and support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

As the development of technology is rapidly increasing, people are starting to question if assessments through formal written examinations are still a valid method of assessing students. In my opinion, I believe that written examinations are still valid and should be still part of the education system. This is because it helps students to build a more stable foundation and it is also a more proven way of improving a student's spelling.

It has been scientifically proven that students tend to memorize information easier when they write it. Therefore, making it compulsory for students to take down notes and eventually sit for a written assessment is essential to build a good foundation. Furthermore, written assessments are also a good way to ensure that students are only writing down what they know. Technology has allowed for plagiarism which is discouraged, and writing prevents that from happening in assessments. For example, if students were to carry out assessments through the computer, they are able to just copy and paste articles that they find on the internet.

Writing assessments are also a good way to improve students' spelling. When performing tasks on computer, there are applications which are able to help correct students' spelling. For example, Microsoft Word has the autocorrect function which automatically corrects a spelling mistake. I believe that this is not a good approach towards improving a student's spelling as they would start to take it for granted and not take their own initiative to ensure that their spelling is correct.

In conclusion, I believe that formal written examinations are still a valid method of assessing students. Although there are applications which can improve learning better, writing assessments should not be completely abolished. (283 words)

33. It seems that nowadays TV has become an essential part of life. For some people, it is medium to spread news & awareness to others whereas for some others, it acts as a companion. What is your opinion on this? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

The television has become an essential in almost everybody's household. It serves multiple purposes, such as a medium to spread news and awareness to others, whereas some people treat it as a companion. In my opinion, people should utilize the benefits that television provides and not treat it as a companion.

Televisions give us access to numerous programs that are being broadcasted from all over the world. This includes news and entertainment programs. These programs allow us to keep up to date with occurrences all around the world and may even help us to make future plans. Furthermore, there are also education programs which are able to help kids in their learning.

However, some people may get too attached to their televisions as they become too engrossed with certain programs, specifically entertainment programs. This can cause people to spend their time unproductively and may even cause illnesses. This habit may also cause them to be antisocial which can affect their future careers.

In conclusion, although television has become an essential in every household because it has a lot of benefits, people must still use it wisely. It is not encouraged for a person to spend all his time watching television. He should utilize the benefits instead such as learning new things or keeping up to date with the news. (219 words)

34. Many people think that different types of regions affect a person's success. What is your opinion about native regions and the influence that a successful person can have on the native region that he belongs to?

Many people think that it is very rare for a person of native background to be successful. This may be due to the fact that native regions are regions of the less fortunate as they are behind in terms of economy and technology. However, I believe that it is possible for a person to be successful if the right amount of effort and guidance is provided. A success story will also be able to influence the others in the native regions.

Success depends on the sheer effort that an individual puts in to achieve his goals. Despite the lack of studying material or technology, it is still possible to gain knowledge via other sources such as books and writings. For example, although there may not be computers in a third world country which limits children's learning they are still able to gain knowledge through books and certified teachers.

When a person of native background reaches success, not only will he be able to bask in his glory, but he is also able to share his knowledge and experiences with his fellow native residents. For example, he is able to hold seminars in schools to share with the students his life experiences and influence them to work as hard as he did.

In conclusion, it definitely is one of the rarer sights to see a successful person of native background, but it is not impossible. Success is achievable through hard work and determination. However, the successful person must not forget his roots and play his role in ensuring that the future generations are also exposed to his experiences. (267 words)

35. As a result of advances in medical care. Average life expectancy is increasing for men and women. Do you think most people will see this as a positive development? What are the disadvantages of an ageing population for individuals and society? Support your point of view with reasons and/or examples from your own experience or observations.

Due to advances in medical care, the average life expectancy is increasing for both men and women. I believe that most people will see this as a positive development as it means that their loved ones such as their parents are healthier and are also able to live longer. However, an increase in life expectancy may also have some disadvantages to individuals and society.

Firstly, one of the disadvantages of an increased life expectancy is the financial stress that may affect certain families. The elderly are more prone and vulnerable to sickness, and they would have to be sent to hospitals regularly for checkups. These checkups are usually very expensive and will have to be funded by family members if the patient does not have the adequate funding. Situations like these can severe family ties or even cause arguments within families

Furthermore, an increase in life expectancy also means that there will be an increase in unemployed people. Governments may not see this favorably as it means that there will be a need to build more residential units that may cost money. The economy of the country may also be affected by the construction of new houses which limits the space that can be used for tourism purposes.

In conclusion, although an increase in life expectancy is usually regarded highly, there are also some underlying disadvantages that have to be recognized. Therefore, governments should start making plans to ensure that these disadvantages are controlled. (244 words)

37. "In a war of ideas, it is people who get killed". Does a common man suffer from a group's ideology? Express your opinion, and support the same with reasons and examples.

A group's ideology can sometimes harm the general public. A famous saying that represents this is "In a war of ideas, it is people who get killed". I personally agree with this statement because it is evident that when various groups with different ideas come into an argument, it will usually hurt the public. A good example that can be used is the government.

Governments usually consist of various groups or parties that have different approaches towards the betterment of the country. Whenever one party is unhappy with another due to a loss, they usually take it out on the residents by increasing costs of products or even property. For example, if the current government does not obtain sufficient votes to win, they may reduce the benefits of the pension scheme. This is unfair for the residents as they have only minded their own business but still have to deal with these unfortunate events.

Secondly, governments usually rollout an idea onto the residents even though it is not accepted by the public. They claim that it will help the growth of industries in the country but never considered how the residents may feel. For example, governments introduce projects despite the negative feedback from residents. In this case, it is clear that common man do indeed suffer from ideologies that have been forced onto them unwillingly.

In conclusion, it is true that the in a war of ideas, people do get killed. Therefore, I strongly agree with the statement as it is very clear that people are bound to get hurt if their opinions are not considered before deciding on an idea. (271 words)

38. The mass media including TV, Radio and newspaper influence our society and shape our opinions and characters. What is your opinion?

Advertisements that we obtain through the mass media influence our opinions. Mass media may consist of TV, radios and newspapers, which are things we have access to everyday. I believe that some of the reasons why we are influenced by mass media are because the mass media usually represents the general public and we tend to think it is right.

The news that we obtain through mass media are usually perceived as the correct news. We simply believe what is presented to us without doing our own study or research on the topic. This is because people are usually only interested in stories that may affect their wellbeing. For example, if we were to come across news that tells us there has been a robbery recently in our neighborhood, we would start to become more wary and take necessary action.

Furthermore, people also believe that the news represents the general public, and that is why we go along with it. It is scientifically proven that people tend to agree with the majority when little is known about the topic. For example, if an advertisement promoting a new type of toothpaste was presented through the mass media, we may simply believe that it is the best and proceed to make the purchase before performing actual study on it.

In conclusion, people are easily influenced by the mass media because they only take interest in situations which affect them. Therefore, I agree with the statement that the mass media influences our society and shapes our opinions and characters. (256 words)

39. Age discrimination occurs when a decision is madeon the basis of a person's age. In the workplace, these are most often decisions about being employed in the first place, winning promotions or being unfairly dismissed. Should discrimination against older workers be made illegal?

Age discrimination is an occurrence which is frequently seen in workplaces. This situation usually arises when decisions are made about being employed, winning promotions or even being unfairly dismissed. In my opinion, discrimination against older workers should be made illegal. This is because the capability to work isn't based on age, but based on relevant skills and experience.

Employing an older person may have several advantages that can lead to improving the company's workplace. An older person would have more refined skills as he would have had previous working experiences that provided him with the opportunity to improve. For example, an older person would have had more number of jobs previously as compared to a younger employee. Furthermore, he would also be more familiar with various tasks and perform them more efficiently as compared to younger staff.

Secondly, decisions made within a workplace should be based on their capabilities to perform tasks. An older person may have the edge in his role due to his vast network that he has built over the years in the industry. For example, the older employee may find certain tasks easier to complete due to habit. Therefore, disregarding the older person's efforts just because of his age would not be fair and would also be very unreasonable.

In conclusion, I strongly believe that discrimination against older workers should be made illegal. If employers were to make decisions based on a person's age and not his capabilities, it would be an unfair and unjust call. (250 words)

40. The claim that animals have "rights" has been the subject of much debate since the 1970s. Are zoos helping or hurting our animals? Should zoos be banned? Do you agree or disagree?

The topic of animals' rights has been a heated topic of debate since the 1970s. People claim that putting animals in zoos are not giving animals their rights and should be banned. However, I believe that the zoos are in fact doing their best to preserve and promote the awareness of animals. Therefore, I disagree with the idea that zoos should be banned.

Majority of the animals that are placed in zoos are species which are facing extinction. The reason as to why they are placed in zoos is because these animals require shelter to prolong the continuation of their species. Zoos play their role and provide food and care for these animals every day. Although some people may think that zoos mistreat animals and only use them as a source of income, I strongly disagree with these.

Secondly, zoos are also a good way to promote the awareness of these animals. Many people around the world do not realise the importance of certain species in our ecosystem. Therefore, a zoo is a good place to promote and share the importance of playing our roles and helping these animals to prolong their species. This advertisement is best when introduced to children as that will lead them to understanding the importance as they grow older

In conclusion, I believe that zoos should not be banned and should continue to be funded. This is because zoos are playing an important role in spreading information regarding animal lives and they are not taking away the animals' rights. (254 words) supporters and other forms of antisocial behavior. If sporting events can lead to antisocial behavior, can team sports really be good for us?

41. Team sports are generally promoted as a great way to keep fit and build character. However, sporting events such as soccer matches are often accompanied by violence between rival

Team sports are usually favored by the majority as it is a great way to keep fit and build character. However, it seems that there is the occasional violence between rival supporters which may lead to antisocial behaviors. Due to this, people question if team sports are really good for us at all. In my opinion, I believe that team sports are indeed good and the drawbacks that are derived from it can be solved with strict laws and penalties.

Some people claim that sporting events are often accompanied by violence between rival supporters. However, I believe the opposite is just as true as well. Supporters are able to befriend one another when attending these events. For example, supporters of a single team who attends the sporting event are able to share the joy together when their team wins. Although I do not deny that violence are occasionally involved, it is possible to resolve this by introducing strict laws of penalties to those who are involved.

Secondly, team sports are also good for the sporting industry. Team sports tend to have the most fans and that can lead to the appearance of numerous businesses such as advertising and sporting merchandise. This also means that team sports are able to create job opportunities for people around the world. For example, having more sporting events will allow food vendors to sell more products.

In conclusion, although some sporting has drawbacks, I believe that the advantages greatly outweigh them. These advantages do not only include character building, but also the aforementioned points. Therefore, team sports are good for us and should continue to be promoted. (272 words)
